

Child Care Administration

INDUSTRY FACTS

What do child care administrators do?

Child care administrators are responsible for all operational aspects of child care centers and preschools. Their goal? To help kids successfully move from one developmental stage to the next—and have fun doing it.

Here's a breakdown of their responsibilities:

- Nurturing the emotional, physical, intellectual, and social development of children
- Developing and implementing education programs and institutional policies
- Hiring, training, supervising, and providing professional development for employees
- Ensuring compliance with legal requirements, codes, and regulations
- Facilitating communication between parents, children, teachers, and staff

Where do they work?

They work in child care centers, preschools, or any early childhood education (ECE) facility. But 29% of child care administrators are self employed.

How much do they earn?

According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor and Statistics, the average salary for this role is between $19,000 and $28,000 per year*. Just remember that salaries vary based on location, facility, and experience level.
