

Medical Coding & Billing for Outpatient Services

INDUSTRY FACTS

What do medical coding and billing professionals do?

Medical coding and billing professionals translate medical records into standardized codes used to bill patients and third-party payers such as insurance companies and Medicare. The comprehensive Medical Coding and Billing for Outpatient Services program will teach you to use all of these codes—CPT, HCPCS, and ICD-10.

Where do they work?

Medical coding and billing professionals usually work on-site at a healthcare facility. Positions can be found in physicians' offices, clinics, hospitals, insurance companies, large coding outsourcing companies, and other healthcare facilities.

How much do they earn?

This career offers an established career path for advancement, especially in large hospital networks, and leading industry organizations report that, on average, medical coding and billing professionals with one credential earn over $52,000 a year. Medical coding and billing professionals can also increase their earning potential by earning additional industry certifications.

How's the job outlook?

The U.S. Department of Labor estimates job growth to increase by 9% by 2030*. That's a significant number of professionals needed in the field to code patients' records; act as liaisons between healthcare facilities, insurance companies, and other establishments; and manage the responsibilities associated with electronic health records.

Can't say enough positive things about Career Step and their Medical Billing and Coding program. From the first email inquiry to my most recent phone call with an instructor, the experience has been professional, academically challenging, and rewarding. One of the most appealing aspects to me personally was the flexibility for studying, which I can schedule around my family's needs. I did a lot of research before I chose Career Step for this program, and I have no regrets!
