

Medical Office Manager

INDUSTRY FACTS

What do medical office managers do?

What does an office manager do in a medical office? A lot.

You'll be a crucial member of the team and a critical part of keeping the medical office running smoothly, particularly in terms of administration and billing.

Medical office manager duties vary job to job, but a day in your new life will probably include the following tasks:

- Overseeing day-to-day operations
- Providing quality customer service
- Answering patients' billing questions
- Scheduling appointments
- Managing billing and collections
- Verifying patients' insurance
- Updating electronic health records
- Completing and submitting insurance claims
- Reviewing unpaid and denied claims

Where do they work?

Medical office managers are needed in almost every type of healthcare facility coast to coast. You'll be able to easily adapt your broad skills to jobs in hospitals, doctors' offices, skilled nursing facilities, and home health agencies, among others. You'll also be job-ready for positions in both the medical administrative assistant and medical billing fields.

How much do they earn?

Annual salaries vary by employer, location, and experience. But the average medical office manager salary is between $44,279 and $59,739 a year.*
